

AquaFlash® System Installation Guide DS196

I. General:

- A. This document provides guidelines for the application and use of the Dryvit AquaFlash System at rough openings for windows, doors and other penetrations, as well as across substrate changes, floor lines and other movement joints. Use of AquaFlash System provides an effective water resistant, membrane flashing system for exterior walls when used in conjunction with Dryvit's Backstop® NT™ and exterior insulation and finish systems. The two-component system consisting of AquaFlash Liquid and AquaFlash Mesh is fully compatible with and may be applied either before or after installation of the Backstop NT water-resistive barrier used over the face of the wall. It is important that proper procedures and building code requirements for design and installation of flashings be followed to ensure a durable, long-term installation.

AquaFlash Liquid is applied to the substrate surface, AquaFlash Mesh is laid into it and additional AquaFlash Liquid applied over it.

II. Installation at Window, Door and Other Rough Openings:

- A. The AquaFlash System can be used to provide additional water protection for the framing and sheathing at rough openings of windows, doors and other penetrations. The materials may be applied before or after the Backstop NT application on the wall surface.
1. For rough opening preparation, the first step is to clean the surfaces to which the AquaFlash Liquid will be applied. All surfaces must be free of dust, dirt, oils or other contaminants that may interfere with adhesion.
 2. Measure the sill width, jambs and head, and cut the AquaFlash Mesh to the proper lengths so that it extends a minimum of 2 in (51 mm) beyond the window nailing flange (if any). This allows for proper overlap with the Backstop NT on the field of the wall.
 3. Using a brush or 3/4 in (19 mm) nap roller, apply a liberal coat of AquaFlash Liquid to the substrate surface. AquaFlash System must be applied so that it extends onto the substrate and also covers the entire rough opening to the interior face of the wall.
