have seen of the objects of reason and of instinct since instinct must be in early operation for the exigencies of organic life while reason in the complexities of its functions is only ready in a general sense to act when the brain shall have acquired sufficient maturity for those endless physical impressions which come through the medium of the senses and from which the soul gathers its earliest treasures of knowledge This then is the relative aspect in which must be regarded the correspondence between the progressive development or hardening of the brain and the operations of the mind in early life the development or maturity of the brain having as well a reference to the multifarious physical contributions from the senses as to its co operation with the soul in acts of intellection The soul therefore may be abstractedly considered in as perfect a state in infancy as at any stage of life and thus does the
