

Gender and identity

- Discourse analysis approaches the issue of gender in various ways. They fall broadly into four types of approach:
- The way language itself is gendered – or has become gendered; e.g. the way male pronouns can be used to refer to either males or females;
- The way women and men, girls and boys are stereotypically represented in discourse;
- the way men and women interact in discourse and whether or not there are differences in their style of talk;
- The way language is used by males or females in specific discourse.

Approaches to Gender and Spoken Classroom

Discourse Helen Sauntson, 2015-12-11 Gender is a hotly debated topic in the field of education. The role that language plays in educational contexts especially in the classroom has long been acknowledged. Innovatively combining approaches in the analysis of classroom discourse, this book offers rich empirical findings as well as being theoretically interesting and valuable.

Sexed Texts Paul Baker, 2008-07-01 Sexed Texts explores the complex role that language plays in the construction of sexuality and gender, two concepts that are often discussed separately although in practice are closely intertwined. The book draws on a range of theoretical perspectives and published research including performativity theory, feminism, queer studies, psychoanalytical theory, Marxism, social constructionism and essentialism. Illustrative examples are taken from written, spoken, internet, non-verbal, visual media, scripted and naturally occurring texts. Some of the questions addressed in the book include: how do people construct their own and others' gendered or sexual identities through the use of language? What is the relationship between language and desire? In what ways do language practices help to reflect and shape different gendered, sexed discourses as normal, problematic or contested? Taking a broadly deconstructionist perspective, the book progresses from examining what are seen as preferable or acceptable ways to express gender and sexuality, moving towards more tolerated identities, practices and desires, and finally arriving at marginalized and tabooed forms. The book locates sexuality and gender as socially constructed and therefore examines language use in terms of socio-historical factors linking changing conceptualisations of identity, discourse and desire to theories surrounding regulation, globalisation, new technologies, marketisation and consumerism.

Professional Discourses, Gender and Identity in Women's Media Melissa

Yoong, 2020-11-23 This book examines the professional discourses produced in women's media in Malaysia and the subject positions that they make available for career women. Drawing on feminist critical discourse analysis, critical stylistics and feminist conversation analysis, it identifies a range of gendered discourses around employment and motherhood that are underpinned by postfeminism and neoliberal feminism. Through close linguistic analysis of magazine and newspaper articles and radio talk, the study reveals that these discourses substitute balance, individual success, self-transformation and positive feelings for structural change and entrench the very issues hindering gender workplace equality. Chapters discuss topics such as sexism, work-family balance, extensive and intensive mothering, breadwinning, gender stereotypes, beauty work, synthetic sisterhood, media practices and gender equality policies. This book will be of great interest to students and scholars of language and gender, discourse analysis and media communication and cultural studies as well as policy makers, media practitioners and feminist activists.
