Letter 'E' Yvette N. A. Pappoe,2022 The COVID 19 pandemic resulted in an unprecedented health and economic crisis in the United States In addition to 900 000 deaths in the United States and counting another kind of crisis emerged from the ongoing pandemic an eviction crisis In August 2020 an estimated 30 40 million people in America were at risk of facing eviction by the end of the year Black women renters faced a higher risk of losing their homes At the onset of the pandemic federal eviction moratoriums were implemented to prevent the evictions of tenants who were unable to pay their rent during the pandemic However the temporary nature of the moratoriums had little to no impact on the persisting effects evictions have on Black women seeking future housing Black women were most affected by evictions before the pandemic but were devastatingly impacted throughout the pandemic and beyond The pandemic simply brought this oft forgotten group s plight to the forefront Using an intersectional lens this Article seeks to analyze the current eviction crisis to highlight who is most burdened and why There has been widespread concern expressed about the discriminatory effects of landlords use of criminal records in making rental decisions and its impact on Black and brown people This Article is the first to contextualize similar concerns about the use of eviction records and its disparate impact on Black women Having an eviction record much like having a criminal record blacklists tenants from finding future housing Renters with mere eviction filings not final eviction orders on their records face the harsh collateral consequences of eviction I refer to the stigma that follows a person with a record of an eviction proceeding on their public record as the Scarlet Letter E Landlords regularly displace or blacklist Black women who have prior eviction records thereby preventing them from accessing future available housing units To assist with this landlords typically hire tenant screening companies to conduct background reports which typically comprise information related to a tenant s criminal history residential history credit score and eviction history Landlords use of these reports disproportionately impacts Black women who have an eviction filing on their record and prevents them from securing public and private housing This Article is the first to analyze the disparate impact of the use of eviction filings in rental housing decisions under the FHA The Article argues that blanket tenant screening policies are arbitrary artificial and unnecessary barriers that operate invidiously to discriminate against Black women and therefore violate the Fair Housing Act FHA It then recommends some areas of reform like eviction record expungement sealing laws and a ban the box initiative all of which draw heavily on work related to the use of criminal records spearheaded by organizers and advocates In addition the Article suggests an interpretation of the FHA by HUD and the courts to hold landlords and the tenant screening companies that produce these tenant screening reports liable under the FHA for the disparate impact these policies and practices have on Black women

The Relationship of Housing Eviction Rates to the Supply of Rental Housing Peter A. Feiden,1982 Implications of COVID-19 Eviction Moratoria as Housing Policy Erin Fowler,2022 Housing policy has been historically neglected at the federal level in America Meanwhile poverty and housing inequality continue to exist particularly for marginalized and disadvantaged communities of color across the country The COVID 19 crisis prompted an unprecedented level of government response and intervention into the housing market Most notably the U S Centers for Disease Control and Prevention CDC issued an eviction moratorium which prevented a landlord from evicting a tenant for non payment of rent if the tenant could attest to a pandemic related loss of income This thesis analyzes the implications of that eviction moratorium along with one issued by the state of Florida for tenants and landlords through a case study of Orange County Florida The case study also identifies concurrent strategies employed to keep people stably housed throughout the pandemic in the form of an Eviction Diversion Program assesses whether local governments can look to these policies moving forward gauges how the CDC moratorium was interpreted understands how the government nonprofit and private sectors collaborated throughout the process and identifies recommendations for Orange County moving forward These questions are answered through a policy review of the moratoria and eviction filing counts and 14 stakeholder interviews from which a thematic analysis was generated through the lens of urban resilience equity planning and collaborative governance

Eviction Notice in San Francisco Aleksandr Volkov,2019-07-18 Sufficiency of an eviction notice is a question of success or failure of the entire eviction process It is not just a piece of the puzzle it is its fundamental cornerstone While landlords can fail elsewhere without a proper notice they may not succeed It is even more so in the City and County of San Francisco a municipality with an enforced eviction control where the local ordinance dictates which properties and what kinds of eviction are regulated and what is required of an eviction notice to be enforceable Drafting a notice is the eviction s first step and it should be done right This book educates on how to find or better avoid common mistakes made by the notice drafters The material is equally useful in defense helping to identify noncompliance in someone else s notice I hope you will enjoy the book no matter what side you are on This volume covers general requirements for eviction notices issued for for fault and no fault evictions all nine for fault and the first four non fault just causes available under the San Francisco eviction ordinance

Next publications will address the rest of the no fault evictions

Evictions in the Housing Court Raphael L.

Addressing the Eviction Crisis and Housing Instability Through Mediation Karen L. Tokarz, 2020 The United States faces a massive eviction crisis There were 128.6 million households in the United States in 2019 of which 37% were renters of those 47.6 million renter households more than two million or one in every twenty five were at risk of losing their homes through evictions Current and future economic challenges such as that brought on by the Covid 19 pandemic will inevitably increase evictions and exacerbate housing instability While eviction lawsuits are an important legal remedy evictions lead to homelessness harm family member health cost landlords money destabilize the housing market disrupt neighborhoods increase crime and overwhelm the courts Many aspects of mediation make it a more just and effective dispute resolution approach than court evictions This Article demonstrates the effectiveness of mediation and advocates for increased use of mediation to decrease evictions and housing instability
