Improving the Utility of Evidence Synthesis for Decision Makers in the Face of Insufficient Evidence M. Hassan Murad,2021 BACKGROUND Healthcare decision makers strive to operate on the best available evidence The Agency for Healthcare Research and Quality Evidence based Practice Center EPC Program aims to support healthcare decision makers by producing evidence reviews that rate the strength of evidence However the evidence base is often sparse or heterogeneous or otherwise results in a high degree of uncertainty and insufficient evidence ratings OBJECTIVE To identify and suggest strategies to make insufficient ratings in systematic reviews more actionable METHODS A workgroup comprising EPC Program members convened throughout 2020 We conducted interactive discussions considering information from three data sources a literature review for relevant publications and frameworks a review of a convenience sample of past systematic reviews conducted by the EPCs and an audit of methods used in past EPC technical briefs RESULTS Several themes emerged across the literature review review of systematic reviews and review of technical brief methods In the purposive sample of 43 systematic reviews the use of the term insufficient covered both instances of no evidence and instances of evidence being present but insufficient to estimate an effect The results of the literature review and review of the EPC Program systematic reviews illustrated the importance of clearly stating the reasons for insufficient evidence Results of both the literature review and review of systematic reviews highlighted the factors decision makers consider when making decisions when evidence of benefits or harms is insufficient such as costs values preferences and equity We identified five strategies for supplementing systematic review findings when evidence on benefit or harms is expected to be or found to be insufficient including reconsidering eligible study designs summarizing indirect evidence summarizing contextual and implementation evidence modelling and incorporating unpublished health system data CONCLUSION Throughout early scoping protocol development review conduct and review presentation authors should consider five possible strategies to supplement potential insufficient findings of benefit or harms When there is no evidence available for a specific outcome reviewers should use a statement such as no studies instead of insufficient The main reasons for insufficient evidence rating should be explicitly described NurseAdvance Collection on Resources for Implementing Evidence-based Nursing ,2006
