Intangible Flow Theory in Economics Tiago Cardao-Pito,2020-12-13 The dominant economic explanations of the 20th century are not comprehensive enough to describe the complexity of economy and society and their reliance on the biosphere Intangible Flow Theory in Economics Human Participation in Economic and Societal Production outlines a new theory that challenges both economics and the relativism conveyed in social constructivism poststructuralism and postmodernism To mainstream economics and Marxism monetary flows transform us humans into commodities To this new theory flows of economic elements as physical goods or money are consummated by intangible flows that cannot yet be precisely appraised at an actual or approximate value for instance workflows service flows information flows or communicational flows The theory suggests a systematic alternative to refute the human commodity framework and interrelated conjectures e g human capital human resources human assets Furthermore it exhibits that economic and societal production is fully integrated on the biosphere Conversely contemporary relativism argues for the end of theory development suspension of evidence and entrenchment of knowledge validity among local systems named as paradigms epistemes research programs truth regimes or other terms Thus relativism tacitly supports dominant theories as the human commodity framework because it preventively sabotages the creation of new theoretical explanations Disputing relativist theses intangible flow theory demonstrates that innovative theoretical explanations remain possible This book is of significant interest to students and scholars of political economy economic sociology organization economics and social theory     A Research Annual Warren J. Samuels, Jeff E. Biddle, Ross B. The Evolution of Modern Economic Theory Carl Cone, 2017-09-29

The long paper which gives the title to this collection and which has never before been published as paperback was initially an attempt to promote international academic understanding. The Economics Department at the London School of Economics had arranged a colloquy between two groups of Russian and British economists and where the author asked to contribute a general survey of the present state of economic theory as taught in Western centers. For reasons which are explained in the opening section the author decided to adopt an historical approach and the notes on which the present paper is based were the result. The remainders of the papers have as their common denominator a continuing interest in the history of economic thought. Beginning with a lengthy critique of Schumpeter's magisterial History of Economic Analysis they range from an appraisal of Bentham's continuing relevance to a review of Robertson's Lectures on Economic Principles with some special attention to John Stuart Mill both as a human being and as an economist. They have been written at various times in the last thirty five years and minute scrutiny if such were thought to be worthwhile which of course it is not might detect some variations of emphasis particularly perhaps in the implicit valuations of Marshall and his contribution in the papers on Wicksteed and Schumpeter's History respectively. But in spite of a certain shift of perspective here the author thought it worthwhile to attempt substantial redrafting. Apart from the correction of obvious inelegances or actual errors the excision of some duplicating quotations and in a few cases the addition of supplementary material and references the papers are reproduced as originally written. In each instance the author has given footnote acknowledgements of the place of original publication.

The Lost Art of Economics David C. Colander, 2001

Economics is the study of a complex system in which simple laws are not always forthcoming. That complexity mandates three branches of the profession: positive, normative, and the art of economics. The economics profession has focused on one of these: positive economics, and in doing so has lost the art of economics. In a series of provocative essays the author argues that most of what economists do is applied policy which belongs in the art of economics, not in normative or positive economics. The essays explore the forces in academic institutions that have led economics to its current position as well as the implications of the lost art for the economics profession and its future. In the end the author is positive about the future of the profession and predicts that in 2050 it will no longer be as Solow suggested it currently is: the overeducated in pursuit of the unknowable. Instead it will be the appropriately educated in search of the knowable. The essays are written in a highly accessible style and can be enjoyed by most non-economists as well as by those economists who don't take themselves too seriously. It can be usefully read by all economists even those who do take themselves too seriously.
